STAR Story Worksheet

Most interview is built on "tell me about a time when..." questions. This sheet turns your real experiences into ready stories. Rough words are fine — nobody ever sees this page but you.

STAR means: Situation (what was happening) · Task (what you needed to do) · Action (what YOU actually did) · Result (what happened next — numbers if you have them).*

FIRST, PICK YOUR THREE STORIES

Try to have one story each of: working with people, a problem you solved, and something you're proud of. Skim the common prompts below; three of them usually match any interview.

- ☐ a time you helped a customer or coworker who was frustrated
- ☐ a mistake you caught (or made) and what you did next
- ☐ a day that was too busy, and how you decided what came first
- ☐ something you learned fast when you had to
- ☐ a change you suggested that actually got tried
- ☐ a time you helped someone on the team succeed (it still counts)
- ☐ _____

> Write the answer out in messy handwriting first. Speaking it out loud later teaches you the shape of it — the words themselves will come on interview day.

Story 1 the time: _____

S What was going on? keep it to two sentences

T What were YOU supposed to do about it?

A What did you actually do — step by step? say "I," not "we": they're hiring you

R What happened next? if there's a number, write the number

THIS STORY WORKS GREAT FOR QUESTIONS LIKE...

Story 2 the time: _____

S What was going on?

T What were YOU supposed to do about it?

A What did you actually do — step by step?

R What happened next?

THIS STORY WORKS GREAT FOR QUESTIONS LIKE...

Story 3 the time: _____

S What was going on?

T What were YOU supposed to do about it?

A What did you actually do — step by step?

R What happened next?

THIS STORY WORKS GREAT FOR QUESTIONS LIKE...

Keep the finished sheet in your bag. Glance at the story titles before you walk in — naming them is like greasing the doorknob. You never have to memorize your answer; you lived it.